Minutes from the May Meeting

Chapter President Dave Schmidt called the meeting to order around 8:00.

1. Patcon update

The Hudson Elks hall has now been paid for following a meeting with the new hall manager. We have been granted the concessions that we sought, have been given the Elks member discount (a substantial reduction in cost), and will be allowed 6:30 am access for set-up at no additional cost. Clean-up details required of us are still being finalized.

2. Web Store

... remains 'close to being done' as there are some issues still to be resolved as to how the website operates.

3. NorthShoreCon

A brief overview was given of the NorthShoreCon contest from the previous weekend—it "went well" although the numbers of entries was not high. Feedback from the hosting club was provided by John Walker.

4. Treasurers report

Treasurer John Touloupis read out an itemized breakdown of April transactions and starting and ending balances. A motion to accept the report as read was made from the floor and passed by floor vote.

5. New member

Rémi Moretti joined the club and introduced himself. He also brought a model for Show-and-Tell. See Page .

6. Gift of modeling items

Club member Dave Zucker has donated some items to the club (via Bill Michaels) for club members to have.

The business meeting then adjourned, followed by Show-and-Tell and the monthly raffle.

—Richard Price, Secretary

Show-and-Tell Gallery

Jeff Brown's squad of veteran Astra Militarum troopers from the Warhammer 40k fantasy universe. Jeff sent us the following description:

The figures are painted to represent a custom regiment I made for a wargaming campaign. They are called the Sonoran Windriders, air assault specialists who arrive from low flying aircraft via "grav-chutes," small anti-gravity devices that reduce the speed at which they plummet to the ground. They are from a desert planet that was once a lush, verdant jungle many millions of years ago. Their color scheme is influenced by the terrain in which they fight. There are multiple shades of brown and tan. The blue stripes and blue berets are borrowed from the Soviet VDV, also famous air assault specialists who fought in desert/mountain conditions.

The models themselves are made of resin and are all from a company called Anvil Industries which markets to the Warhammer consumer as an alternate to GW models. They were very easy to work with, and the casts are super crisp. The leader model [center figure of the middle group] was custom made by HeroForge. I chose components from a list, and they 3D printed the model to my specifications. I painted in my usual style with my usual products. I did quite a bit of drybrushing, especially on the fabric, which sped up the painting process significantly. I also did try some new techniques for painting lenses. Almost every model here is wearing goggles of some kind, and they were painted to emulate the reflection of the sky and sun.

Show-and-Tell Gallery (continued)

John Walker's 1:35 scale Marder I (Panda). John scratchbuilt the trailer and used an AFV Club 7.5cm Pak 40 ammunition set. He also added a bunch of items from Orange Hobbies: shovels and cleaning rods on rear, tow cable, notex lights, MP 40 and MG 34 machine guns, radio, transformer and junction box. The ammo bins had to be rearranged to suit the AFV Club ammo. The figure is from DML's Sturmgeschütz loading crew. Paints are AK Real Colors and Tamiya acrylics; the model was weathered with AK Interactive brown wash, filters made from Tamiya paints, pastels, MMP powders, and pencil graphite. Markings are for an unknown unit, France, summer 1944.

Ora Lassila's 1:72 scale DFS Kranich II (AZ Model). Ora built this mixed-media kit mostly OOB, but added photo-etch seat belts. Other non-styrene parts provided by the kit included photo-etch instrument panel, cockpit details and pitot tube, and vacuform canopy. Paints are Tamiya and Vallejo acrylics. Decals are from the kit. Markings are for the flying club "Parin Ilmailukerho," Finland, late 1950s. This plane was the first two-seat glider registered in Finland in the late 1930s, and the only Kranich found in Finland at any time.

The Deutsche Forschungsanstalt für Segelflug (German Institute for Glider Research) was formed in 1933 to centralise all gliding activity in Germany under the directorship of Professor Georgii. The DFS was involved in producing training sailplanes for the Hitler Youth and Luftwaffe, as well as conducting research into advanced technologies such as flying wings and rocket propulsion.

The Kranich (Crane) was developed by Hans Jacobs for the DFS in 1935. Version II became the most widely built two-seat glider in Germany from 1935 to 1939, with several hundred examples built. On 11 October 1940, Erich Klöckner in a Kranich achieved an altitude of 37,598 feet. This record height for a glider flight. This record height was only surpassed ten years later by the American Bill Ivans during a similar scientific program in the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

Jamie Michaels' 28mm (?) Captain-General Trajann Valoris (Games Workshop) from the Warhammer 40K fantasy universe, built OOB and painted with Vallejo acrylics. Jamie mixed together various colors of flock for the base.

From the Warhammer 40 Lexicanium: Trajann Valoris is the 17th and current Captain-General of the Adeptus Custodes and a High Lord of Terra. At the time of the Thirteenth Black Crusade, he was considered to be perhaps the deadliest individual warrior in the entire Imperium. While serving as an Allarus Custodian, Trajann gained fame in the destruction of the Space Hulk Mournful Siren, the defeat of the Genestealer Cult of the Emperor's Writhing Shadow, and spearheading a preemptive strike against Waaagh! Krushfist. After these feats he was accepted into the Companions for 22 years before he was reassigned due to his desire to be more proactive. Thereafter he gained the rank of Shield-Captain and spent several centuries leading sorties throughout the Sol System and beyond. He was elevated to the position of Captain-General following the death of Andros Launceddre during the Years of Madness. His rise has seen the Custodes become the most proactive they have been since the Age of Apostasy.

Richard Price's 1:72 scale AV-8B Harrier (Hasegawa). Richard added the follow aftermarket items: Aires cockpit set and wheel bay set, Advanced Armor wheels, and Quickboost airbrake set. Paints are True North and Model Master enamels. Decals are from the kit. Markings are for US Marine squadron VMA-223. Planes from this unit, in this paint scheme, were used in the filming of the movie "True Lies."

Jamie Michaels' 28mm (?) "Ashes to Ashlynn" (Privateer Press), built OOB and painted with Citadel colors and metallics. For the flames, Jamie started with a white base coat, over which he successively applied transparent yellow, transparent orange and transparent red. The flames then received a coat of clear gloss varnish, which was not used on the rest of the figure.

"Ashes to Ashlynn" is from Privateer Press's MiniCrate series, metaphorical representations of some of the most iconic figures from the Iron Kingdom fantasy universe. Designer Matt Wilson writes, "MiniCrate frees us from the concerns of game rules and settings and allows us to do a purely artistic expression, the only goal being to create a great-looking miniature that you want to paint and put on the table. A lot of the inspiration for our MiniCrate creations comes from creative wordplay with the name. For Ashlynn d'Elyse, I only knew that whatever we did had to contain "ash" in the title. Beyond that, I was stumped. Ashlynn is an iconic character in the Iron Kingdoms, and I wanted to do something that properly glorified her. My fondness for winged female warrior provided the solution. Ashlynn is a leader of the Llaeese Resistance, a group of indomitable freedom fighters battling to resurrect their kingdom from ruin, so I gave her the fiery wings of a phoenix, representing her rise from the ashes of Llael and the indestructible spirit that continues to fight for her nation and her people. 'Ashes to Ashlynn' is, in a sense, a symbolic metaphor for the true character of Ashlynn d'Elyse."
